FIREMEN'S CARNIVAL BIG SUCCESS

The Firemen's semi-annual Carnival and Street Dance last Saturday night fully sustained its reputation for attracting a large crowd of people and sending them away well pleased with the evening's entertainment. People from far and near were in attendance and the entire space between the depot and the sidewalk on the north side of North Front Street was crowded with mer-ymakers. Various kinds of amusements occupied the attention of the guests, but dancing was the main attraction.

The Blue Ridge Play Boys furnished the music from their sound truck and the amplifier made it audible to every part of the expansive dance floor. At eleven o'clock attendance prizes were given as follows:

1. Lawn Mower, donated by Sun Utility Co., Clovis, Scheweers.

2. Electric Iron, donated by San Antonio Public Service Co., Dr. T.
B. Knopp.

3. Waffle Iron, donated by Medina Electric Cooperative Inc., Mrs. O. J.
Bader.

4. Bridle, donated by Eugen Huesser, Mr. Haby.

5. Dish Washer, donated by San Antonio Appliance Co., Sam Johnson.

6. Bed Spread, donated by G. & M.
Food Store, James Weynand.

County Attorney Frank X. Vance acted as master of ceremonies for the Fire Boys in the distribution of the prizes, after which he made a few appropriate remarks, and on behalf of the Fire Department thanked the crowd for the attendance and patronage given.

The financial proceeds were:

Receipts $629.12
Expenses, approximately $100.00 Profit $529.12

Receipts were $75.00 more than ever before.

The Fire Company asks us to make public acknowledgement of the Company's thanks and appreciation to the business people of Hondo and elsewhere for the gift of keno prizes and donations. They especially thank the San Antonio Public Service Co. for installing the lighting system, furnishing the electric current and for giving display space in the show window for exhibiting the prizes.

Both the Hondo and the Alamo Lumber Companies are gratefully remembered for the loan of lumber. And each and every attendant is reminded that their patronage is greatly appreciated and that they are extended a cordial invitation to attend the next like event.

MORE HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUBS WANTED

The Home Demonstration Agent, Miss Velma Hambleton, is very anxious to organize home demonstration clubs in all parts of the county. She is here to serve the entire county and it is through these clubs that she can do her best work and reach the greatest number of people.

Several reports have come to her of some communities wanting clubs, so will some one interested person in these communities contact the agent, so that definite plans can be made.
She especially wants those interested to be organized soon so that they will be included in the new year books that will soon go to press.

Remember, call, write or see Miss Velma Hambleton at once so that she can work in the organization of your club with her regular routine, so that each club will be ready for the next demonstration.

LIONS CLUB MEETS

The Hondo Lions Club met at the Favorite Cafe Wednesday noon at the regular luncheon with a large attendance. Final arrangements were made for their softball game with the Sabinal Lions at Barry Field Friday night, September 5th. All Lions will be dressed in the latest women's styles. For an evening of entertainment and fun do not fail to see this game. Two weeks ago Hondo defeated Sabinal and that group is coming over for revenge.

GRAFF CLAN MEETS

On Sunday, August 31st, under the lofty pecans on the banks of the Medina, gathered the descendants of Louis Graff for the reunion of the various branches of this family. Conversation and food were the fare, as well as the business meeting that followed the lunch, basket picnic style. Brought out at the business meeting and general discussion of Graff lore, was the fact that at the present time, there are 181 descendants and at one time there was a high of 209. All during the day the painting depicting the family tree was on display. This interesting canvas is a result of the patient and careful work of Miss Emma Graff, with the aid of Supt. C. F. Scheweers, family historian.

A poll of the members present indicated that it was the unanimous desire of those in attendance (over 100) that the reunion be made an annual affair. From all remarks addressed to those in charge it was gathered that everyone was well satisfied with the arrangements and accommodations, and that the present chairman and other officers remain in charge. It remains the fervent hope of the writer that time and fate will be kind to the entire group, that it will be additions instead of subtractions that we will be confronted with when we meet again in 1942.—C. H.

HOME DEMONSTRATION LADIES PLAN EXHIBIT DAY

In the office of the home demonstration agent, Saturday, Aug. 26, specific plans to hold an Exhibit Day on September 27 were made by Mrs.
Walter Krenmuller of Dunlay and others of the Exhibit Committee.

Mrs. Krenmuller as Chairmen, and Mrs. Andrew Braden and Miss Maritina Hardeman have the plans broken down into units with the following committees to have charge of each unit. Building Committee: Mrs. Andrew Braden, Mrs. Arnold Balzen, and Mrs. John Krenmuller; Food Committee: Mrs. C. C. McAnnally, Mrs. Preston Gaines, and Miss Maritina Hardeman; Commodities: Mrs.
Lionie Howard.

This year the exhibits will be in the Colonial building just south of the lumber company. They will be shown just the one day, September 27, with the exhibits up ready for showing at 9:30 A. M. and to be removed by 6:00 P. M.

Unlike other days of this kind the ladies will vie only for ribbons instead of money prizes. They will leave off the plate lunch but will fill you with the right proportion of hamburgers and ice cold soda pop, with possibly coffee and cake. This year the ladies decided to add the commodity sale. Every loyal club member is making or donating some small commodity that can be sold for a quarter. With Mrs. Lionie Howard and her helpers in charge these commodities will be sold to replenish the county council fund of all the home demonstration clubs.

All in all, it sounds like another successful day for the ladies and their work.

ANNUAL FESTIVAL TO BE OB- SERVED BY ST. JOHN'S PARISH meats, sausage, a variety of salads and cakes, iced tea and coffee. You pay for all you can eat, an abundance of well-flavored food prepared by the best cooks in the parish.

A variety of games and amusements for both adults and children will be provided throughout the day.
Keno will be the main diversion and many beautiful handmade premiums are being donated by members of the parish so as to make the games more interesting.

The grounds committee is preparing to accommodate a record crowd and there will be food and entertainment enough to go around.

You are cordially invited to attend.

NEGRO FOUND DEAD

A verdict of death by natural causes, probably a stroke or heart failure, was rendered by Justice of the Peace H. V. Haass Sr., following an inquest held at 10 A. M. Friday, August 29, on the body of Shed Taylor, colored. The negro, about 65 years of age, was found dead in the O. C. Johnson pasture near El-stone, and death was judged to have occurred two days before discovery of the body. From evidence it is believed the negro had been pulling corn when stricken but died before reaching the ranch house, as his body was found 100 yards from a stack of corn and about 75 yards from the house. He had dropped his hat at the end of a corn row, and taken off his shoes on the way to the house. His saddled horse was found still tied to a tree.

Taylor's body was turned over to his daughter, Mrs. Eliza Taylor Fennel Holcomb, for burial.

APPOINTED CIVILIAN ASSIST- ANT NAVAL RECRUITER

Mr. O. J. Bader has been officially notified from the U. S. Navy Recruiting Station at Houston of his appointment as Civilian "Assistant Navy Recruiter" in the San Antonio district. This district has a population of 531,879. Medina County supplying 16,106 of the total. During the month of August, there were 41 naval recruits from the San Antonio district, four of those coming from Hondo.

A former Hondo boy, Mr. Sterling Fly of Crystal City, has also been appointed as assistant recruiter in the Uvalde district. It is possible that others will be appointed later, when each county is given a certain quota of recruits to fill.

COUNTY COUNCIL TO MEET

gram is being arranged by the Yan-cey group and will be presented at

THE LOW DOWN FROM HICKORY GROVE

This Mr. Carr who has been going around the country talking about States' Rights, you know, he is quite a duck. He is the Governor of Colorado. Also he is a Republican. Most people kinda figure he is a democrat, on account the Old Democratic Party slogan was "states rights". But I checked up—he is a Republican.

This Mr. Carr says the way the wind is blowing now, she looks like there won't be much for a governor to do. Everything will be run from Washington, if the Governor has nothing to say about how his state is going to be run, then I guess the voters would be in the same mess. Of course they can still write their Senators—we still have senators. And even if most of them are away lecturing, etc., and not in Washington, their Secretary will answer your letter, which is just as good as if the Senator, himself, would write—or maybe better.

If more Governors and people do not get on the bandwagon with Mr. Carr, governors and States' Rights are gonna be obsolete and extinct before we know it, and you will only see them in a museum.

Yours with the low down,
JOE SERRA

They are playing politics low-down again in this editor's beloved native state—old Mississippi. Back in the 19-teens Mississippi sent one of her ablest and most courageous sons, James K. Vardaman, to the U. S.
Senate. He should have had a long and useful career in that body where men of courage and independence shine so conspicuously because so rare. But with that perversity with which the American populace crucifies the real statesmen and exalts the demagogue and the time-server, Mississippi listened to Woodrow Wilson's demand that they unseat Var-daman because he exercised his independence by being one of the "few wilful men" who blocked said Wilson's ambition to be a world dictator through means of his League of Nations dream. They sent their statesman to a premature grave, a broken-hearted victim of ingratitude, and elevated a smooth time-server to his place—a man who could take a kicking from the New Deal and still lick its boots. But time and circumstance have again made the place vacant, and again there is interference from Washington with a view to again filling it with a willing tool of the administration. In the race are two members of Congress. As far as we have followed their careers, one is the latter type. He is acceptable because he can be used. The other has shown some degree of that independence which is supposed to distinguish real statesmen. He is not acceptable because he is not wanted to ask the reason why; he is wanted only to obey. And they are playing politics low down. In exchanges coming from strategic points about the state are appearing dispatches from Washington in this general effect: "The president today approved loan and annual contributions contract in the amount of fifty thousand dollars for rural housing projects in your county." Those who watched the New Deal's antics in the late Texas campaign, grasp the full significance of such actions. Well, in Texas for once we "beat the U. S. Treasury".
What will the verdict in Mississippi be?

This is 1941. Numerous of our own people not to mention millions in the war-torn countries of the world are "ill-clothed and ill-fed".
There is to be untold suffering for lack of nourishment and clothing sufficient to endure the cold of the coming

DEFENSE BOND QUIZ

Q. I would like to provide a regular income for myself when I retire. Can this be done by buying Defense Savings Bonds?

A. Yes. If you purchase a Bond for $37.50 each month, each Bond will mature in exactly 10 years. Thus at the end of 10 years you will have $50 payable each month as each of your Bonds reaches maturity.

Q. But I will need more than $50 a month.

A. Then you should invest a larger amount each month. Every $75 you put into Defense Bonds will pay you $100 ten years from now. Meanwhile, your money serves your Government during this period of national emergency.

NOTE.—To buy Defense Bonds and Stamps, go to the nearest post office, bank, or savings and loan association; or write to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington, D. C.

WE'RE IN THE NAVY NOW

Mr. O. J. Bader, civilian assistant naval recruiter, received the following letter this week from two Hondo boys, Thomas Danie and Jerome Finger, who recently joined the Navy and are in training at San Diego, Calif.:

Dear Mr. Bader:
Jerome and myself are really sorry we did not write sooner, but we are so busy, it is a shame.

We move to North Unit Tuesday. Then it will not be so bad. We get liberty there and more time to ourselves. Here we are busy from dawn till we go to bed at night.

We do have it a little easy at times—because we were both appointed recruit petty officers. Jerome is Police Petty Officer and I am Gunner's Mate. That way we get out of some of the hard work. Jerome gets out of more than I do.

We are getting along fine and like it O. K. here.
Give everyone our regards.
Have to go now.

TOM AND JEROME.

THOUGHTLESS PRODIGALITY

One of the most dangerous signs of the time is the appalling public indifference to debt and government spending.

All favor the expenditure of as many billions as defense requires. But a public attitude which permits unnecessary non-defense spending to go on unchecked, and which does not demand of governmental leaders a workable plan for eventually paying the bill, is a threat to our very existence as a democratic nation. Thoughtless prodigality is the surest road to disaster for an individual, a business, or a nation.—Industrial News Review.

Preston Langford and wife arrived Saturday from Chester, Pennsylvania, on a visit to Mr. Langford's boyhood stamping grounds. He was partly reared here, being the son of Mrs. Etta Langford, a grandson of the late J. P. Linnold and a nephew of Melville Linnold, but left here some years ago for Pennsylvania where he since married. After visiting here with his friend, Ben Crow, and others and in Uvalde, he and Mrs. Langford left for Houston where they hope to secure employment and become Texans.

We were pleased to have a call Monday morning from Mr. and Mrs. Gus Birkner and their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kempf. Mr. Birkner is now a retired contractor and builder residing near Luling. He erected a number of Hondo's brick buildings during the middle and late 1900's, among them the building now occupied by the Leinweber Co. mercantile business. His first building here was the six-room two-story brick school house, the lower three rooms of which now constitute the northwest corner of the present building. The Birkners are now aged people—Mr. Birkner in his 80's—but they still have a warm place in their hearts for Hondo and Mrs. Birkner asks us to assure the people of Hondo that she loves them all. Mr. Kempf, youngest son of the late August Kempf, was the second printer "devil" employed for a few months in this office soon after the purchase of it by this editor in 1903. He quit in a little while, going into the builder's trade under Mr. Birkner, if we remember correctly, and later marrying his daughter. In 1907 he went into the mail carrying service in San Antonio and has been constantly employed therein since.

"Oh, Mr. Swan! You can't be really serious," said Joan, appearing in a doorway. "Mrs. Cameron expects me and I'm sure my reputation is good enough to survive the walk there with Mr. Guthrie." She was talking as one coaxes a child, and Guthrie bit his lips in an attempt to stifle a laugh.

"Miss Quarrier, you know my wishes. If you choose to disregard them—"

"Mr. Guthrie is an educated gentleman," broke in Joan, "not a cave man. I will be home by ten o'clock."

She Laughed Merrily.

Good night!" And crowding past the discomfited Swan, Joan Quarrier closed the door of the mission in his face.

"It is not difficult to tell who's commanding here," chuckled Guthrie. "I don't like to humiliate the little man. He means well enough but if they will send weak men to work in this country, and the Oblates strong ones, like your friend, Pere Rousseau, the Indians will flock to the French."

"But Cameron tells me you've done wonders with the orphan Crees."

CHAPTER XI

She was waiting in the clearing when Shot loomed up, sniffed, looked at her curiously, then pawed her foot with fore feet.

"Shot, you know me?" And she rubbed the ears of the wriggling alre-dale.

"He has a good memory for his friends," said Garth, as the dog leaped in the snow under the pleased girl.

"I think it quite wonderful, though, that he should remember me. He knew me but five days."

Garth's mouth curled. "His master knew you no longer." And the factor of Elkwan revealed in the slow color that touched her temples—the swift flickering of heavy-lashed lids.

"His master had reason to remember the guests who insulted him in his own house."

"One of his guests," countered Guthrie, "was an angel of mercy. We seldom forget the visitation of angels, do we?"

"And the other—an ungrateful scandal-monger."

"I told you last night he was a blessing in disguise."

She looked squarely in his eyes as she said: "But I did not believe you, Mr. Exile."

With a gesture of helplessness, he insisted, "But how am I to prove it to an unbeliever?"

Her eyes clouded. "Let's walk along the shore," she parried, and led the way, Shot circling her, begging for a frolic.

"You're trying again for the spring trade from the island?" she asked.

"Oh, with Souci there, and the echo of his spirit voices in their ears, we shall hold the hunters who crossed the strait."

"Then Elkwan will have a wonderful year?"

"Yes, the best in its history."

"Because of its new factor."

"Because of Etienne Savanne and Saul Souci."

"No," vehemently, "because you went inland and found Souci, and had the nerve to cross the channel through the ice in a York boat, then took a long chance over the new ice to reach the island in time; Mr. Cameron knows."

He glanced sharply at the clean profile, crowned by a plume of wind-tossed hair. "You're a doughty champion."

"No, I'm only a fair critic."

"May I never have a fairer—nor one more unfair."

"Unfair? What do you mean, Mr. Exile?"

She had given him his opening. "I mean, Joan Quarrier, that you have shut your heart to the truth," he plunged in impetuously. "I mean that you are coupling me with ghosts—dead memories; that you will not see—understand—" In his eagerness to clarify her vision of him—erase the memory of Ethel with whom, in spite of his denials, he still seemed hopelessly involved, Garth floundered—came to a halt through sheer excess of emotion.

"Can't we continue the good friends we are, Mr. Exile? We need friendship—understanding, up here on this lonely coast. Can't we—like two good comrades—hold to what we have?"

Dazed, helpless in the face of her obsession—her evident conviction that her brother had been the cause of his ultimate break with Ethel Falconer, Guthrie walked on in silence.

"Can't we hold to our friendship," she repeated, facing him, and slipping off her mitten, extended her hand.

He took it. At the raw pain in his eyes Joan Quarrier's lips opened in an involuntary catch of the breath. Her eyes widened in a look of wonder, as if startled by what she saw.

"You know you always will have my friendship," he said thickly. "I'm coming down the coast in February—to see my friend. May I?"

"Your friend will be very glad to see you."

At the door of the mission, she met his reluctant good-by with a smile so personal—so like a caress that the hand he gave her shook like a leaf in the wind.

"My friend," he repeated under his breath as he followed Shot back to Etienne and the waiting dog team, "my friend—my world."

Hour by hour, over the coast ice, the light sled reeled off the miles. So good was the going, so keen the five great huskies for the trail, that the men left their robes only to stretch their legs. The forty miles to the Big Willow river slid past by early afternoon, and the hungry men turned in to the river mouth to build a fire from driftwood and boll their kettle.

Twenty miles directly across the strait, the gray Akimiski hills parted to form Seal cove.

"I'd give a good deal to know how they took the news over there of the loss of the northern fur, Etienne," said Guthrie, busy with his plate of beans and bacon. "Hello! There's a team coming in over the ice. Wonder who it is."

For a time Etienne studied the black object through the binoculars, but when the kettle and fry-pan had been stowed and the sled cover re-lashed, two rifles in their skin cases rode by the sides of the passengers.

A mile from the noon camp at the river the sled, evidently headed for the mouth of the Kapiskau, drew inshore.

"A hunter from de Kapiskau. We weel now hear how dey swear on de schooner dis Christmas."

The dog-team slowed to a walk and shortly were within speaking distance. "Kequay!" called Savanne. "Were you go?"

Leaving his panting dogs, who straightway lay down on the ice, the stranger hurried to the sled from Elk-wan. As he approached, it was evident to the two men that the Cree was laboring under strong excitement. His sled was heavily loaded and his hard breathing indicated that he had run much crossing the strait. Staggering up, he gasped: "De boat—ovair dere!

All gone! McDona! Ha! Ha! dead—all dead!"

"What?" cried Garth, "the schooner's crew—dead?"

"You come from dere—you see dem?" demanded the astute Etienne.
A snaky hand shot out, and gripping the Cree's shoulder, shook him violently.

"You see dem? How many?" repeated the half-breed, searching the Indian's face in an attempt to probe the truth of his statement.

"I see one dead man. No answer when I yell," insisted the other, and seemingly at the memory of the ship of the dead, his small eyes filled with dread.

"What happened? Was this man shot?" demanded Garth, exchanging glances with Savanne.

"He die of sickness—I look an' run. It was ver' bad down dere een dat boat," said the Indian with a shudder.

"Were the dogs there?"

"I see no dog."

"Were you from?" snarled Savanne, thrusting a face fierce with suspicion, into the Cree's.

"From de Kapiskau. I go to de boat to trade some fox."

"You get dat flour from de boat—steal it!" hazarded Etienne, guessing at the nature of the bulky load on the Indian's sled.

The Cree nodded. "Dey not use it now."

The smart face of the head man at Elkwan hardened into creased leather as he turned to Garth, and whispered:
"I don lak dis ting. He see one man.
Mebbe de oders ambush us. What we do?"

"I'm going over to find out. It's my duty. Boucher will wait for days.
They may not all be dead. I'm going."

"Suppose eet ees a trick? Suppose de ones not dead wait for der re-vanche, wen we come?"

"We'll stalk 'em and see."

Dropping his mittens and deliberately reaching under his capote, Etienne drew his skinning knife. Coolly running a thumb over the edge, he thrust his face into that of the disturbed Indian while his slit-like eyes snapped as he bit off the words: "You lie! McDona! Ha! Ha! sen' you to Kapiskau. You spik de trut', or I—" and seizing the Indian by his hood, he made a quick pass at his throat.

Overawed by the fierceness of the strangers, the undersized Cree swayed on his feet, repeating in his seeming terror: "I spik de trut'. You go to de boat—you see!"

"We go to de boat—an' you go wid us," snarled Etienne.

At the words, the Indian's face went gray. "De spirit—I am scare to go back," he protested; but the inexorable Etienne ordered him to turn his dogs and lead the way back.

It was hard on the hunter, if his story was straight, but bearding a waiting McDona! in his lair was not to be lightly hazarded.

"I think the man is honest, Etienne.
He naturally hated to go again to the ship. But what could have happened —flu—smallpox?"

Savanne shook his head. Only recently the bay had been swept by influenza, brought in by a whaler, im-partially striking down Eskimos, Indians, and dogs, but he was still suspicious of a counterstroke by the schooner people, sore from their defeat, and confidently expected a confession from the dog driver ahead before the dusk caught them. Guthrie, in the faint light of the stars he made out the ice-sheathed poles of the schooner, Garth patted his excited

dog. "Stand to, Shot!"

The alreale stiffened, sniffing the wind, then side by side, man and dog cautiously made their approach. From behind a pressure ridge, a hundred yards from the frozen-in craft drifted with snow to her low rails, Guthrie stopped. There, under the dim stars, silent, sinister, lay the ship. Was it the sepulcher of luckless dead, or—

Two whistles from the direction of the ship started Guthrie swiftly over the ice behind his silent dog. Circling the stern, he found behind a mound Etienne and the shaking Cree.

"What is it?"

"I hear some soun' on dat boat."

"Eet ees de splint," whispered the Cree.

"We go up an' leesten," said Etienne, prodding the reluctant Indian forward.

Standing with rifles leveled on the plank-sheathed deck-house, they waited. Presently to the straining ears of the men came a moaning as of a creature in agony, to culminate in a crecendo of groans.

The two men peered questioningly into each other's faces. At their side the alreale trembled in a frenzy of excitement.

"Make him call to them," muttered Guthrie, with a nod at the panic-stricken Cree.

The steel muzzle of Savanne's rifle found the Indian's ribs.

In a voice shattered by terror, the Cree called: "Kequay! 'Allo!' But no answer from within broke the heavy silence. They waited. Again low moaning drifted from the deck-house.

"I'm going aboard," said Guthrie and calling Shot, leaped the rail, followed by Etienne. A door, behind the sheathing, opened to his hand, and with the dog in front, they made their way down to the pitlike blackness of the cabin. The odor of spilled whisky, feed—and the stench of corpses struck them like a blow in the face. Striking a match, Etienne lit the stub of a candle he took from his pocket. In its flickering light the two gazed in horror at the chaos around them. On the table, the floor, whisky bottles, empty, half full, lay in a litter of meat and biscuit tins, clothes and scattered feed. Sitting, jammed together, were the dead.

The Indian had seen but one body
and fled, so he said; but the schooner had been silent as a tomb. Queer that all had died, so soon. As he left, he had called repeatedly from the deck, without answer, except once, faintly, he had heard something—like the voice of a spirit.

When the Cree had reluctantly cached his load of flour and they ice, he begged them not to force him ship was haunted by demons, an infernal crew.

on the contrary, believed that some epidemic, or possibly scurvy, had stricken the crew, and wondered if the great McDona!, in the pride of his strength, had found a grave in the Akimiski ice.

had been silent as a tomb. Queer that dian from the north had said. They had brought the sickness—were displeased with McDona! Ha! Ha!—and would surely bewitch him if he again went to that ship of the dead. But Etienne insisted that the seeming fear of the Cree was only a ruse to lead them into the trap while he hung back and thus avoided a shot in the back for his treachery.

Halfway across, the dusk from Akimiski moved out to meet the travelers, soon to look upon, in the berths of the schooner, death, in all horror of plague-stricken men; or to meet a treachery, as Guthrie believed, too vile for the uses of a fighting man like Laughing McDona!. But the canny half-breed would not be convinced, and the knife, shifted to his capote sash, and the uncased rifle barrel thrusting from his robe, were sinister witnesses to his distrust of the Cree.

The barrens of the island purpled, then fused with the dusk. Stars glittered above the moving teams. At last in the starlight, the black masses of the hills flanking Seal cove loomed ahead. The Indian stopped his dogs.
"Eet ees ovair dere." He pointed to the invisible shore.

Ordering the disarmed Cree to remain with his dogs, Etienne called Garth for a whispered council of war.

"De schooner ees not far. We stop an' tie up de husky. Den you an' Shot go one way an' I tak' dees feller wid de gun een hees back an' we circle roun' de boat."

"All right! If either sees or hears anything, two long whistles. Will they hear our dogs if they yelp?"

"No, eet ees too far."

Shot, trained to silence, would be invaluable in a fight, but the Muskies yelping would betray them, so they were lashed to the sleds.

"Eef we don't see nodin', I mak' dis feller holler to de ship. Den we wait.
I tell heem he is de first een de boat, wid de gun een hees ribs. He ver' scare—something bad here," warned Etienne.

"He's afraid of the devils," suggested Garth, uncasing his rifle, and regretting that his army automatic hung neglected in its holster on the rack at Elkwan. This staid of the ship had much of the color of a trench raid—a fight in the dark, if Etienne was right —and he missed the feel of his pistol on his belt, the drag on the shoulder strap of a bag of Mills bombs.

As they separated, Etienne gripped Garth's hand. "I meet you at de boat. Keep behin' de ice wen I mak' heem holler, eet dey shoot."

The idea of stalking dead men was grotesque, but as Garth and Shot made their way slowly toward the shore, for the stars were dim, the possibility that Etienne's suspicions were not unfounded grew in the mind of Guthrie. Suppose the Indian had seen a dead man. There might have been a fight aboard while the rest were temporarily ashore after fur. True, McDona! might be dead, but with the leader gone, Breault, desperate, sick possibly, perhaps insane, might have evolved this scheme to lure some of the Kapiskau people across the ice.

For the Indian was bound for Kapiskau when they met him.

That the ruse was McDona!'s Guthrie put aside, but strange things had happened before among a ship's company wintering in the ice, and who could guess what had fallen out on The Ghost?

When, in the faint light of the stars he made out the ice-sheathed poles of
the schooner, Garth patted his excited
dog. "Stand to, Shot!"

cautiously made their approach. From
behind a pressure ridge, a hundred
with snow to her low rails, Guthrie
stopped. There, under the dim stars,

the ship started Guthrie swiftly over
the ice behind his silent dog. Circling
the stern, he found behind a mound Etienne and the shaking Cree.

"What is it?"

"Eet ees de splint," whispered the Cree.

Etienne, prodding the reluctant Indian
forward.

plank-sheathed deck-house, they wait-
ed. Presently to the straining ears
creature in agony, to culminate in a
crecendo of groans.

into each other's faces. At their side
excitement.

"Make him call to them," muttered Guthrie, with a nod at the panic-stricken Cree.

found the Indian's ribs.

heavy silence. They waited. Again
low moaning drifted from the deck-
house.

"I'm going aboard," said Guthrie
and calling Shot, leaped the rail, fol-
the cabin. The odor of spilled whisky,
a match, Etienne lit the stub of a candle he took from his pocket. In
horror at the chaos around them. On the table, the floor, whisky bottles,
scattered feed. Sitting, jammed together, were the dead.

had been silent as a tomb. Queer that all had died, so soon. As he left, he had called repeatedly from the deck,
without answer, except once, faintly, tesquely between boxes in a corner, a rigid hand gripping a glass, the candle lit the staring eyes and gaping mouth of a dead man.

"Black Breault!" muttered Guthrie.
"Died drunk! But that groan! Where are the rest?"

Turning, nauseated from the air and the loathsome spectacle, they found a stateroom. In two berths lay the dead bodies of the bearded mate Guthrie had met on the beach, and a sailor. Then a muttered groan and a curse led them to the adjoining room.
Guthrie stood in the low door, holding the candle above his head.

In a bunk a gigantic figure lay in a sleeping bag. Guthrie bent forward, thrusting his arm with the light into the room. The heavy breathing of the bulk in the berth pulsed through the small room.

"McDona!"

Etienne crowded beside his chief, curious to see the man whose fame had swept James bay. The face was turned from the door and Guthrie entered the room to stumble over a bottle which rolled away, spilling its contents. Then he held a light over the mutilated face.

As the candle lit the russet hair and unseeing eyes, flaming with fever above the shattered face with its red beard, Garth Guthrie stared motionless. Slowly his jaw dropped. As if in the spell of some strange fascination, the grimacing face in the candle light held Guthrie's unwavering eyes. Bewilderment, profound, shifted slowly to amazement—to recognition.

"Craig Galbraith!" he gasped. Then swiftly turning back the robes, exposed at the base of the corded neck a jagged scar.

"Craig Galbraith!—Laughing Mc-Dona! God!—what irony!"

Turning to the perplexed Etienne, Guthrie rapidly explained as he felt for the pulse in a huge wrist.

"Etienne, you and I have work ahead! This is 'flu' or pneumonia.
He needs some nourishment—may have starved for days. The bag has saved him—kept him warm with that fever."

"But you nurse heem—dis Mc-Dona! Ha! Ha!" demanded the surprised half-breed.

"Nurse him!" Garth laughed rawly.
"Why, this man took me on his back through hell itself—brought me through a barrage with one of his arms broken and a shot in the chest.
He was my friend—my pal, understand?—saved my life! We were brothers—in France! Light the galley lamp and heat some broth—soup, quick!"

MISS LORENE MARTIN WEDS

Miss Lorene Martin, daughter of Mrs. John Rosenow of Carta Valley, became the bride of George Elliott Love Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Love Sr., Sunday morning, August 24, in a lovely wedding at 8 o'clock in the First Methodist Church of Del Rio, Texas. The Rev. R. F.
Curl, pastor of the church, read the marriage service.

Pink Polyanthus roses and clematis decorated the church for the wedding. Miss Lucille Love, sister of the bridegroom, played the wedding marches and soft organ music during the ceremony.

Mrs. Wayne Love was the bride's only attendant. She wore an ensemble of rose and a shoulder bou-quet of purple asters. The bride was lovely in a silk suit of beige. Her flowers were bronze chrysanthemums and her accessories were black.

Serving his brother as best man was Wayne Love.

Following the ceremony, attended by members of the families and a few intimate friends, the bridal party was honored with a reception in the home of the bridegroom's parents, 109 Central Street, Del Rio.

The table was laid in lace and decked in summer blossoms of pink and white. Mrs. Wayne Love poured the coffee and Miss Leru Huxtable of San Antonio served the wedding cake.

Mr. and Mrs. Love left for a short wedding trip and they will make their home in San Antonio.

Since the announcement of her engagement, Mrs. Love has been complimented with a number of lovely social courtesies. Formerly of Hondo, the bride was reared in Del Rio and on the Rosenow ranch in the Carta Valley country. She attended the local school and later was a student in a business college in San Antonio. Mr. Love was reared in Del Rio and was graduated from Texas A. and M. College. He is a representative of a feed company.

Washington Snapshots

by JAMES PRESTON

Although the dramatic Roosevelt-Churchill sea meeting has tended to throw domestic news into the background, it has at the same time focused attention more strongly than before on American defense efforts. In the light of the statement by Lord Beaverbrook, British Supply Minister, that Britain needs "more and more of everything," officials here say that our defense program will be expanded from beginning to end. The fact that it will probably exceed all previous estimates brings up again the problem of "bottleneck-busting".

One of the bottlenecks that is coming in for more consideration is that of discrimination against workers who want to work and who have the necessary skills but who, either because they don't belong to a union or because they can't join one, are barred from employment.

Already there is a serious shortage of skilled labor in many sections of the country, and the increasing demands of defense production are making it more imperative than ever that everyone who can work should be allowed to do so. Because of strikes and racial discrimination many people at the present time are not given that right. It is pointed out here that Negroes, for example, often face an insurmountable barrier in this connection. While the President has barred such discrimination in defense jobs, the path that leads to such employment is still not entirely open to them.

The discrimination that is leveled against them by labor unions like many of those affiliated with the American Federation of Labor is one of the primary causes of this condition, according to informed sources. The A. F. of L. still permits its member trade unions to write clauses in their constitutions barring Negroes from membership in them and specifically setting forth a definite racial characteristic as a requirement for membership. Phrases like "any white person" . . . "applicants for membership must be white" . . . any moral person of the white race" occur again and again. The phraseology differs slightly, but the idea stays the same.

On closed shop jobs Negroes are thus effectively barred from work, regardless of how badly their contribution may be needed by the industries involved. When Congress looks into racial discrimination against Negroes, observers are wondering what will be the reaction of the A. F. of L., now that William Green, its president, has been named a member of the Fair Practices committee, organized to enforce the edict against racial discrimination in defense.

The problem is admittedly a complicated one, and while its existence may be traced to several factors, those familiar with the facts point out that the industries involved are not to blame. Industry has taken the position that the "right to work is one of the most sacred rights of every individual" and should not be denied.

A statement issued by Walter D. Fuller, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, says that "such union restrictions and the less tangible but realistic prejudices of fellow workers are far more important factors than any arbitrary discrimination on the part of employers. Generally speaking, employers seek efficient workers and are glad to employ those who can contribute to production . . ."

Now that the subject is out in the open, observers are wondering what the Government will do about the existence of official discrimination in its own ranks. The Army's policy that Negroes shall be enrolled and trained in segregated units has often been mentioned in this connection, but there are many other instances that could be cited.

Opinion in informed quarters is suggesting that some officials have sought to concentrate the heat engendered in this issue on industry whereas the fact seems to be that both the Government and labor might well put their own houses in order.

The State Fair of Texas will show more livestock in the 1941 Fair than has ever been shown in the entire South. Featuring this huge show will be a $30,000 National Hereford Show and the National Aberdeen-Angus Show which is the first national show for this breed to be held in the Southwest.

A REMINDER OF A TIME THAT IS PAST

Following is a copy of the original bill of sale now in the hands of Mr.
Ed Ney. It was among the relics in the possession of his father, the late Joe Ney, who found it among the papers belonging to his father, Joe Ney, Sr., the man in whose favor it was made:

Know all men by these presents that I, W. A. Menger of San Antonio, Co. of Bexar, State of Texas—have this day sold to Joseph Ney of Dhanis, for and in consideration of the sum of Two hundred and fifty dollars to me in hand paid—a negro boy named "Jack" about 16 years of age and of black complexion.— I fully guarantee the said boy Jack sound in body and a slave for life.
San Antonio May the 25th 1864.
W. A. Menger.

Witness: A. Moyer.

This bill of sale of a slave is probably one among the last issued in America, as Lincoln had already issued his emancipation proclamation on January 1, 1863, nearly a year and a half previous to the date of sale, and the surrender of the last Confederate command about a year later than the date of sale confirmed the decree.

"Jack" remained in and about Dhanis the remainder of his life, more or less a pensioner on his white friends. He never had any family and died some ten or twelve years ago, if we remember right, a charge on the county, and was buried by members of his race in their cemetery out on the creek north of town.

The second National Beef Cattle Show, and the first ever held by the National Aberdeen-Angus Associa-

$150,000 livestock show at the 53rd annual State Fair of Texas, to be

000 in cash awards will be offered the best of the black breed of cat-will be a breeders' sale of Aberdeen-by Tommy Brooks of Brady, secreta-year, the National Hereford Show

It is expected that the total number of beef animals shown in the two

TO MARY ANNA

Oh, Mary Anna, having fun, Playing in the summer sun, Why did our Lord judge you so That you from us had to go?
Could you not linger another day And come and visit me, and play?
Now it is too late for that.
The kitchen chair in which you sat Is now empty, but it holds A memory dear, and it enfolds All fond hopes and love for you, Whose sunny skies were always blue.
May you be loved in your new home And stay as dear as you have grown.
You are so young to go alone To that strange land of the unknown.

Mary Anna, there's just one thing—Stay beneath the Good Lord's wing.
He'll protect you every day In a sort of personal way.
Rest in peace, He's at your side.
Let Him be your only guide.

PROGRAM ORGANIZED TO FIND JOBS FOR SELECTEES

Urging the patriotic cooperation of every employer in Texas to see that every returning soldier has a job when he gets home, General J. Watt Page, State Selective Service Director, today announced the inauguration of a carefully studied and organized reemployment program which will function through the local boards of the System.

"Many of these returning soldiers must be cared for in this respect beginning this month when the first selectees, National Guardsmen and others to be relieved from active duty by the Army will be released," General Page said. "The Selective Training and Service Act imposes the duty of carrying out its reemployment provisions upon the Selective Service System as well as upon the former employers of these men."

The reemployment program calls for the appointment of a Reemployment Committee affiliated with each local board, the Director explained. This committeeman will act as liaison agent between returning soldiers and employers.

The function of the local board Reemployment Committeemen will be to get in touch with the former employer prior to the return of a soldier to see if his former job is still available, to transmit the record of returning soldiers who have no jobs awaiting them to the nearest State Employment Service, and to act as liaison agent for the soldier in placing him in contact with available jobs.

In cases where the State Employment Service is unable to find a job for a returning soldier, the local board Reemployment Committeemen must look for local employment opportunities. For his purpose he should obtain the cooperation of local chambers of commerce and boards of trade, Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions, Exchange and Optimist Clubs and like groups, labor unions, the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and similar organizations.

The War Department is cooperating with the Selective Service System in carrying out the obligation of the Government to obtain civilian jobs for returning soldiers. In every camp it is gathering the occupational and educational history of the soldiers together with all data concerning the military career of each that is pertinent to civilian employment. This data will be distributed to local board Reemployment Committeemen by National Selective Service Headquarters through State Headquarters.

The Selective Training and Service Act of 1940 provides that a man inducted into military service shall be given a certificate of satisfactory service if he completes training to the satisfaction of the Army. The Act then specifies that:

"In the case of any such person who, in order to perform such training and service, has left or leaves a position, other than a temporary position, in the employ of any employer and who (1) receives such certificate, (2) is still qualified to perform the duties of such position, and (3) makes application for reemployment within 40 days after he is relieved from such training and service—

"(A) if such position was in the employ of the United States Government, its territories or possessions, or the District of Columbia, such person shall be restored to such position or to a position of like seniority, status and pay;

"(B) if such position was in the employ of a private employer, such employer shall restore such person to such position or to a position of like seniority, status, and pay unless the employer's circumstances have so changed as to make it impossible to do so;

"(C) if such position was in the employ of any State or political subdivision thereof, it is hereby declared to be the sense of the Congress that such person should be restored to such position or to a position of like seniority, status and pay."

The Act also provides that persons restored to their jobs shall not lose seniority and shall be considered as having been on leave or furlough. It further stipulates that "persons so restored shall not be discharged from such positions without cause within one year after such restoration."

OLD-TIMER VISITS CASTROVILLE

Among the many visitors to Castroville on August 24th for the Louis Day celebration, few if any found more pleasure in the occasion than Mr. Chas. Harr, a native of Castroville but for many years residing elsewhere and at present making his home in Millett, Texas. He was taken for a drive over the town and had a wonderful time seeing the places, including the house where he was born many years ago.

He paid a visit to Mr. Henry V. fle and they talked of all the times and of Mr. Harr's father, whom Mr. Vonfle knew well. Mr. Harr doesn't remember much about his father, as he started back to the army after resting at home after receiving a wound in the Civil War during the 1860's. He never came back and until this day it is not known whether he died in the war or was killed by Indians before reaching his regiment.

After the bounteous dinner which the St. Louis celebrations famous, Mr. Harr went over to his old friend, Louis Naegelin, who is now a shut-in. Before the war was over, he met many old friends but the day was too short and he missed some he had hoped to meet and greet again. Nevertheless, it was a joyful day for the old timer, who will be 86 years of age on his next birthday in November. (The vine News requested to copy.)

Perhaps You Remember

THIS IS NOT the first time that you have called upon Dodge automotive plants and men to meet a National Emergency. You probably remember that you called them to the colors once before; that you found their service good; that their dependability was not a catch-word, but a watch-word, in France and on the training fields at home, for the highest mechanical excellence.

Now again you have called Dodge to the National Defense. And Dodge has swiftly answered. Already many thousands of its highly trained men have been transferred from the work of building motorcars to the more urgent and crucial tasks of building army trucks, tanks, guns and airplane assemblies. Again Dodge is throwing its great industrial weight into your program of Defense. And, as you require, Dodge will again remain a defense force, with every ounce of its energy, every inch of the way.
